

Wedding

Songs

There are certain moments during your big day that require a song - these will become the soundtrack of your wedding!

Ceremony Songs

Song one: Processional

Walk down the Aisle - you can pick one song for your entire bridal party to walk down the aisle, or you can have a second one just for the bride.

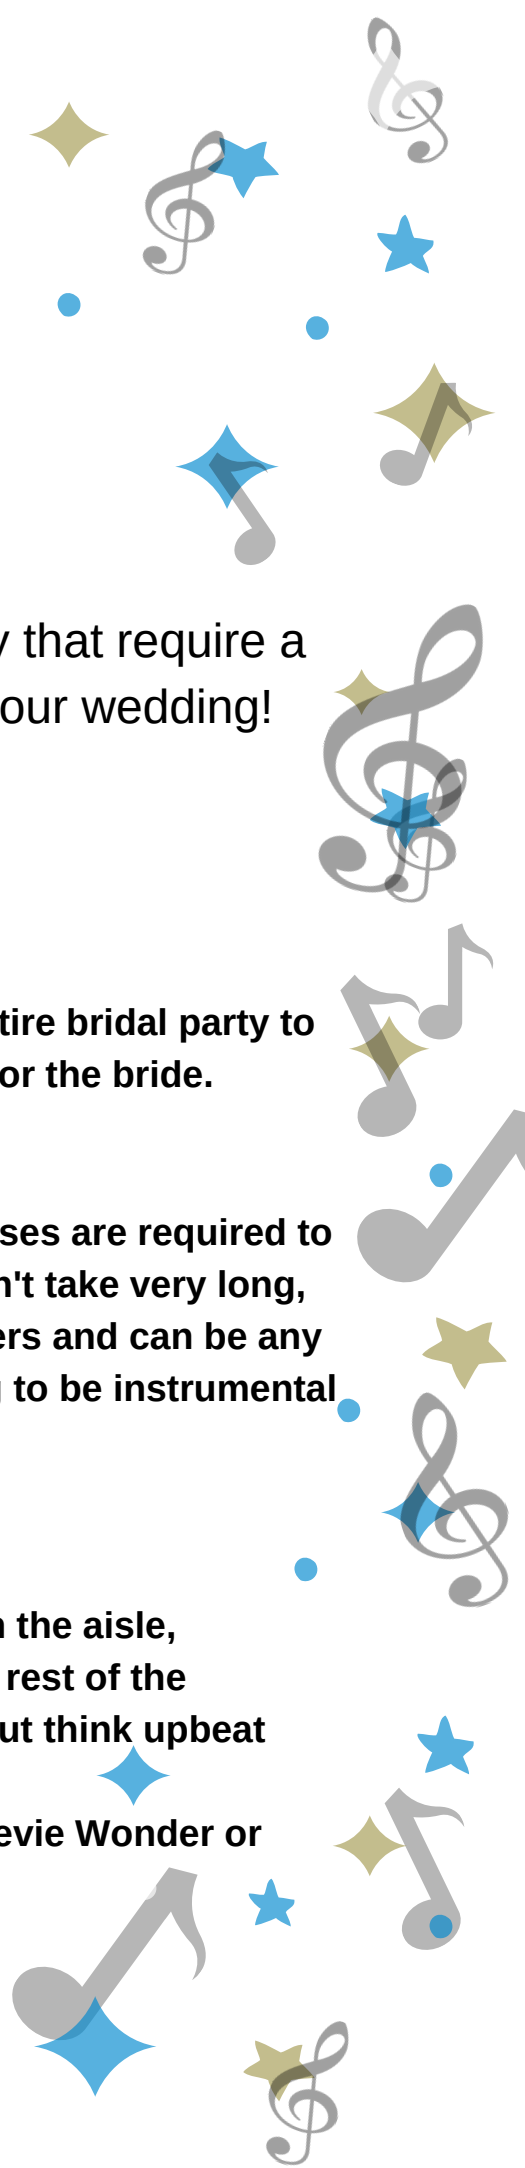

Songs two & three: Signing

At the end of the marriage ceremony you and two witnesses are required to sign three pieces of paperwork. The actual signing doesn't take very long, but getting photos takes a bit longer... These are just fillers and can be any songs you want, but it's a good idea for the second song to be instrumental only. . . This is easier to fade out.

Song four: Recessional

At the very end of the ceremony you will walk back down the aisle, followed by your Maid of Honour and Best Man, then the rest of the Bridal Party. This song can also be anything you want, but think upbeat and celebratory.

Suggestions: Signed, Sealed, Delivered(I'm Yours) by Stevie Wonder or Marry You by Bruno Mars

MOCs

Master Of Ceremonies Sydney

Wedding Songs

Reception Songs

Song one: Bridal Party Entry

This is a song that you and your bridal party will enter the reception to as you are announced by your MC. Some couples are now opting to have snippets of several songs for each of their bridal party couples to enter to, and then one final one for themselves. You can also have all the bridesmaids enter together to one song, then all of groomsmen to another song, then one for the newlyweds. Speak to your DJ or band to make sure they are able to accommodate this.

Song two: Cake Cutting

This song is a bit of fun filler while you cut the cake and toast to each other with champagne. Suggestion: Sugar by Maroon Five.

Song three: Bridal Waltz

Make sure you read the lyrics to any song you are considering for your bridal waltz. Some songs that sound romantic can in fact be about heart break. Once you've chosen the right song for you both, practice dancing to it. If it isn't easy to dance to don't hesitate to go back to the drawing board.

Song four: Father/daughter Dance

If you're including this dance, ask your dad about this one - he might have a song in mind that has always reminded him of you. Practice this one too - it will soothe any nerves on the big day.

Song five: Garter Toss

Many couples are deciding not to do the Garter Toss anymore, but it can be a bit of fun for everyone if you decide to do this. This decision shouldn't be made until the Bride has her dress - some dresses don't allow for easy removal of a garter on the upper thigh.

Song six: Bouquet Toss

Ask your florist if they do a special deal to have a 'toss' bouquet if you wish to keep the one you walked down the aisle with. When throwing, keep your girlfriends waiting for a bit - have a bit of dance, do a few pretend tosses, wait for the song to build up.

Song seven: Farewell

This is the last song of the night, when the happy couple leave the reception to signal the end of the party. This is usually done 15 minutes before the ending time, to allow for everyone to say goodbye. You can have a guard of honour, where everyone lines up in two lines and hold hands over the space between, where you will walk through, or you can have a sparkler send off. Another option is a farewell circle, where your MC gets everyone into a circle, and you each walk in separate directions around the circle to say goodbye to everyone. This can take a lot longer, allow at least two songs, three to be safe, and it will need to be arranged almost 30 minutes before you leave.